The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 21-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) in view of Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19. At best, the claims differ from Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) in reciting use of loop piping. Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19 discloses that use of one continuous loop, which may contain a storage tank, reduces bacterial colonization and leaching of iron, copper, and other metals. It would have been obvious to use loop piping in Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) because Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19 discloses that use of one continuous loop, which may contain a storage tank, reduces bacterial colonization and leaching of iron, copper, and other metals.

Claim 25 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) in view of Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19 as applied to claims 21-26 above, and further in view of Hsu (U.S. Patent No. 5,865,991). At best, the claim differs from Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) in view of Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19 in reciting use of a pump. Hsu (U.S. Patent No. 5,865,991) (column 15, lines 29-30) discloses that a pump pressurizes water prior to entering a filter. It would have been obvious to use a pump in Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) in view of Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19 because Hsu (U.S. Patent No. 5,865,991) (column 15, lines 29-30) discloses that a pump pressurizes water prior to entering a filter.

Claims 24 and 25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) in view of Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19 as applied to claims 21-26 above, and further in view of Shades (U.S. Patent No. 5,958,252). At best, the claims differ from Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) in view of Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19 in reciting a series of backwashable carbon filters. Shades (U.S. Patent No. 5,958,252) (column 4, lines 16-31) discloses that a series of backwashable carbon filters allows incoming fluids to sequentially travel through the filters. It would have been obvious to use a series of backwashable carbon filters in Kenley (U.S. Patent No. 5,591,344) in view of Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation (AAMI) for 1993, 1993, page 19 because Shades (U.S. Patent No. 5,958,252) (column 4, lines 16-31) discloses that a series of backwashable carbon filters allows incoming fluids to sequentially travel through the filters.
